This is our conference...I think we need to take a decision on this." David Cameron has warned that he will resign as prime minister if he wins a vote on British membership of the European Union. He was addressing his Conservative Party conference, saying it would be "irresponsible" for the UK to vote in favour of leaving the EU. Mr Cameron added that he was "sick of politics" and wanted to spend more time with his family and write a book. His comments came after a heavy defeat at the polls in Scotland, and as his Conservative MPs and peers prepare to vote on an EU withdrawal bill in the House of Lords. Mr Cameron was speaking on the opening day of his party's conference in Birmingham, less than two weeks before a crucial vote on EU membership. 'Family first' He told MPs: "I'm not going to stand here and talk about the importance of politics. There will be a time and a place for politics. But right now I am thinking about my family and my future and the future of our country."
